This arc was the first that Hergé had produced since Cigars of the Pharaoh and The Blue Lotus (1934–36). However, as Tintin expert Michael Farr related, whereas Cigars of the Pharaoh and The Blue Lotus had been largely "self-sufficient and self-contained", the connection between The Secret of the Unicorn and Red Rackham's Treasure is far closer.

Chang Chong-Chen - Wikipedia

The man he talked to in the Blue Lotus said and we saw them and another man walking towards a long hillock, that seemed to be going for a good few miles, with a flashlight and pickaxes. Once we were sure they were far enough and too busy in what they were doing, we crawled behind the vehicle before running towards a tree, careful not to be seen since this was a really open space.
